ABOUT FOOT BALL.

Football teams have characteristics, just as human beings have. One team may be always ready to open a game with dash and fire; another team may be of the stolid, plodding kind that has to warm up slowly to its work. One fall at New Haven, the Yale team seemed utterly unable to "get going" in the first five or ten minutes of a game. No matter whether the team that faced us was good or bad, powerful or weak—some way we could not get started. As the season went on, the matter became serious, for wasting ten minutes in the first part of a game may prove fatal to a team's chance of victory. I had a talk with the captain and coach to see what we could do toward waking up the men.

We were just about to play one of our last matches before the important Harvard and Princeton games, and I asked the captain and the quarter back whether we had any one play that they thought would surely result in a gain of two or three yards. I told them that I did not care for a play that they thought would make a long gain, but that I wanted one that would be certain to start us toward the opponents' goal. They were both positive that one play that we had was sure, no matter what happened, to gain us two or three yards.

"Well, then," I said, "as soon as you get the ball in your possession anywhere in the enemy's territory, I want you to use that play, and at least get started toward the goal." The game had not been in progress for more than five minutes when we got the ball just inside the opponents' forty-yard line. I waited with much interest to see what would happen. The signal was given; I recognized it; it was the play we had agreed upon—the play that could not fail to gain ground. The captain of the team himself was to take the ball. The center snapped it, the quarter back passed it, the captain took it, and lost a yard! Yet, later in the game, that sluggish team scored no less than twenty points!

Spectators at a certain football game missed one of the most interesting exhibitions imaginable on the football field, when a team that had planned a particular method of preventing a field goal became convinced that their manoeuvre was not sportsmanlike. On the team were several exceptional gymnasts. They had planned to raise a bulwark of men in three tiers,—one man at the top, two supporting the two,—and thus to form an obstruction some fifteen or sixteen feet high in front of the kicker. They had practiced the trick so assiduously that they could run this bulwark up almost an instant. Just what would happen had they tried the manoeuvre in the game will never be known, but at any rate it would have formed an awkward obstruction for the goal kicker.

I remember quite vividly how near I came to blighting the athletic career of Frederic Remington, who later won fame as an artist. Remington, who was a big, stocky athlete, weighed more than 270 pounds; when he reported at the football field for practice there was more or less comment as to what department he was registered in. When the news got about that he was registered in the art school, some quiet winks were interchanged, for many thought him a "ringer," who was attending the art school only in order to be eligible for the football team. Somewhat disquieted by the rumors, I went to the dean of the art school to make inquiries. The dean assured me that the boy was in earnest about his profession; and when, a few days later, Remington made some sketches of players for me, I abandoned all suspicion that he was more of a football player than an artist.

Every year the contention is raised that it will be easy to simplify the rules that govern football. A few years ago the chairman and the secretary of the rules committee were impressed with the possibility of accomplishing this improvement that they engaged a professional codifier, one of the best in the legal profession, to take up the matter; the rules that have been in the rules book since that time are the result of his work.

Although of course it is desirable that the rules of football be simple, it is also necessary that they be comprehensive. That fact is illustrated by some incidents of the early days of the sports. A player once discovered that the rules did not force a team, after the ball had been punted out from a touchdown, to try at goal. Hence there was nothing in the rules to prevent a team that had made a touchdown from punting out to one of its players, who might stand as near the goal line as he wished, and who might fall at once across the line for a second touchdown. In fact, the team could keep on doing that until it had scored any number of touchdowns. That weakness in the rules was speedily corrected.

Another incident of a similar nature occurred when the universities on the Pacific coast first adopted the Rugby rules. Those rules provided that when the ball went out of bounds a player on the team that had sent it out should throw it into the field of play; they imposed no further restrictions. The custom was for the player to throw the ball fairly well out into the field—of course, to one of his teammates. Hardly a season had elapsed before an ingenious youth discovered a loophole in the rules. When his side had sent the ball out of bounds, he placed one of his own team close to the side line, and put the ball into his hands; that player took a step forward out of bounds, and repeated the performance. Thus a team could work its way to the goal line without losing possession of the ball. The next season the rule was changed so as to read that no player to whom the ball is to pass shall approach nearer than five yards to the side line.

When people were most severely criticizing foot-ball for its roughness, and were urging drastic changes in the rules, some one printed a small folder that contained a proposed set of rules. The following are a few extracts:

"The field shall be covered with two feet of cotton batting, over which is placed a three-fourth-inch carpet."

"The price of tickets will be left to the spectator, he paying for the same at the gate whatever he thinks is right."

"The ball must be covered with pale blue or pink satin, tied with baby ribbon."

"All spectators must be dressed in sombre clothing and must remain absolutely quiet during the progress of the game."

"The only cheering permitted shall be three rah! rah! given by a student chosen by the faculty. These cheers shall be given at the close of each half."

"Each player shall be provided with a flag three inches in length, of the color of the varsity, and a small butterfly net covered with soft felt."

"When a player wishes to tackle a runner he must wave his flag three times in front of the runner's face, not higher than the nose or lower than the waist. The holder of the ball must say, 'Fee, fie, fo, fum; I have the ball and now I run.' The tackler must reply, 'Tweedle dum, tweedle dee,' at the same time catching the runner with his butterfly net."

Great efforts have always been made to keep the tickets for the larger football games out of the hands of speculators. One university issued that warning that those persons whose tickets were found in the possession of speculators would not only be refused the right to apply for tickets in the future, but would have their names published in a "black list" in one of the college periodicals. Among some half dozen persons whose tickets had been found in the hands of speculators one year was a man whose name was entirely unfamiliar to anyone in the ticket department. Upon investigation, however, the man proved to be a graduate of the university, and he was therefore advised that unless he could offer some satisfactory explanation his name would be printed in the black list.

Almost immediately telegrams came to the ticket department and to the president of the university, asking that action be deferred. A letter followed from the gentleman in question, who, it seems, was a clergyman, seventy years old, with no knowledge of modern college athletics.

He had applied for the tickets for a nephew, who was not a college man, and who knew no more than the clergyman did about the rules under which the tickets were sold. At the last minute the nephew had been unable to attend the game, and so had walked into the nearest hotel and sold the tickets. Needless to say, the innocent clergyman was spared the humiliation of having his name printed in the black list.

The rule that forbids a player to wear any metal on his person gave rise to a peculiar situation in a football game a few seasons ago. Shortly after the game had begun, a player complained that his opponent was wearing some metal on his wrist. The official examined the offending player, and found a heavy metal bangle on his left wrist. He told the man to remove the bangle, but the player refused to obey, because, he said, the bangle had been "wished on." However, when he was given his choice of taking off the bangle or leaving the game, he decided to remove the treasure.

In the days when they permitted any member of the university to compete for a position on a team, a rawboned, clumsy fellow reported for football practice. He was so awkward that he did not seem to know where his feet were going when he ran, or how far his arms would reach when he tackled a man or fell on the ball. He had come down from the foothills, where all he had done was to ride hard and to work hard.

But in spite of the rough life he had led, he was peculiarly sensitive and shy. If he received a word of reproach for poor work, he seemed to sink within himself and apparently to give up all hope of ever learning the game.

At the end of a month, however, he really had improved considerably, for whatever he learned he never forgot. I had noticed the man, and on one or two occasions had talked about him with the coach. Both of us, however, thought that he could never overcome his clumsiness. Then one day we had a revelation. There was to be an exhibition of "broucho busting" near the city, and several boys in the university went to see it, as did the coach and I. A sum of money had been offered to anyone who could sit on one of the ponies for five minutes.

Several of the boys had tried it without any success; then some one called for "Charlie"—our awkward candidate for football honors.

I saw the big fellow shrink back and try to escape at the rear of the crowd; but one of the boys seized him, and they dragged him toward the ring.

"Don't make that chap get on that horse!" I said to one of the men in the crowd. "He'll surely be killed!"

"What!" was the reply "Charlie get killed by a horse? You don't know him! You watch?"

Somewhat reassured by this confident statement, I went over to the ring and watched to see what would happen. Finding that he could not escape, Charlie faced the inevitable, and stepping out into the ring, pulled his cap tight over his head and said, "I'll try the horse, mister."

In another second Charlie was on the broncho's back. From the moment he swung his leg over the animal, all trace of his awkwardness disappeared. He seemed actually to have grown on that horse's back, and he met successfully every attempt of the creature to dislodge him.

Six minutes later he had pocketed the prize.

The performance gave us all a different view of Charlie, and after it I was less surprised than I otherwise should have been when he at last won a position on the team. He became a first-rate guard.—Walter Camp in Youth's Companion.

"UNCLE SAM" AS A MONEY MAKER.

By GEORGE E. ROBERTS, Formerly Director of the United States Mint.

The metal money of the United States is circulated far more widely, in a geographical sense, than most people realize. It is accepted at face value in most of the South and Central American republics. In China, which has no national currency, it much used as a medium of exchange; and in Canada our silver and gold pieces move in trade as freely as Canadian money.

Our government, indeed, has realized a considerable profit from such of its silver coins as are circulated in Canada; for silver is cheap, and it costs us only about fifty cents to turn out a dollar's worth of dimes, halves, or quarters. We make no profit in minting gold, but the fact is interesting that our gold coins reserves of make up the bulk of the gold the Canadian treasury and the Canadian banking system.

The mints of the United States do a good deal of business of which the public at large knows little or nothing. We not only manufacture metal money for our own use, but we make coins by the millions for other countries. Every now and then we get an order from some Latin-American republic for a supply of metal pieces, such as bolivars, colons, pesos, or what not, and we must do the work as carefully as if the coins were to be used in our own country.

We make their coins for them at net cost, and make not a penny of profit on the work. We do it merely as an act of friendliness toward our sister republics in the Western Hemisphere. On the other hand, several of the great European nations make a business of minting coins for smaller countries, and are accustomed to bid against one another for such contracts.

The reason why most of the Latin-American republics do not manufacture their own metal money is simple. Even a small mint can hardly be started for less than $200,000. Such a plant could turn out in a few months enough coins to last a little country for many years, and then of course would have to close. It is much cheaper to send an order for the work to the Treasury of the United States.

The first work we did of that kind was for Venezuela, which in 1876 ordered $100,000 worth of one-cent and two-cent pieces. Our next contract, which was made with the Hawaiian Islands, called for 500,000 silver dollars, 500,000 half dollars, 700,000 quarters, and 750,000 dimes.

We have made quantities of so-called silver coins for Santo Domingo, which contain only thirty-five per cent. of silver to sixty-five per cent. of copper and nickel. In 1898 we coined 3,326,714 such pieces,—half dollars, quarters, and dimes,—and in the following year 905,089 more.

When a sister republic wishes to order coins from us, it requests at Washington to confer with our Secretary of State. He refers the minister to the Secretary of the Treasury, who grants the formal permission and authorizes the mint to proceed with the work. If the coins are to be made of silver or of gold, the government that is ordering them usually supplies the metal and pays only for the coinage; but if the coins are of nickel or copper, the mint supplies the material, and includes its value in the charges.

When a foreign government has given us a contract for minting silver coins, it may, if it wishes, furnish the raw material in the form of blank disks of the right size—called "blanks." When our mint has done the work and has been paid, it delivers the coins, packed in boxes or (if gold) in herring casks, to the duly authorized agent of the foreign government.

The government that orders the coins always furnishes the "master dies" for minting them. These "master dies" cost from $200 to $350 a pair; from them the ordinary working dies are made at the mint. Gold pieces must be packed as tight as possible for shipment to prevent abrasion while in transit. Such precious consignments are insured under a special form of policy, which, in old-fashioned language, guarantees them against perils of "the seas, men-of-war, fires, enemies, pirates, rovers, thieves, jettisons, reprisals, takings at sea, arrests, restraints, and detentions of all kings, princes, or people of what nations, condition, or quality soever."

Although Mexico has a modern mint, the monetary reform begun there a few years ago made so great an amount of new coins necessary that the Mexican government had to turn to the mints of the United States. We have made for them 34,000,000 fifty-centavo and twenty-centavo silver pieces, and have also filled a big order for ten-peso and five-peso gold pieces. For the little republic of Panama we have minted large quantities of coins. One of our best customers is Costa Rica. In its scrupulous adherence to sound monetary policies, Costa Rica has been exceptional among Central American countries. The mint in San Francisco now makes all of the coins for the Philippine Islands.

"Uncle Sam" makes about fifty cents on every dollar's worth of United States silver coins that he mints; but he makes a much larger profit, relatively, on his cents and nickels. Formerly the mints purchased blanks for those coins on contract, but now all United States coins are made from the ingot. The seigniorage to the government on one-cent and five-cent pieces amounts annually to about $3,500,000.

The five-cent pieces in reality only one-fourth nickel; the remaining three-fourths is copper. The bronze cent is ninety-five per cent. copper, three per cent. tin, and two per cent. zinc—an alloy adopted because it is very durable, and because it retains polish better than pure copper does.

Uncle Sam has not always had his profitable monopoly of the business of making coins. Before the middle of the last century, a man named Bechtler in North Carolina manufactured large quantities of ten-dollar, five-dollar and one-dollar pieces, which were widely circulated in the South and West. They were about two and a half per cent under value, and that per cent represented his profit.

In those days it was a criminal offense for private individuals to mint money. At one time the Mormons issued half eagles and double eagles of gold much debased with less precious metal. On the obverse side was an eye, with the words, "Holiness to the Lord." At one time private firms in San Francisco did a considerable business in minting gold pieces.

The United States mints furnish "proof" coins at a little more than their face value to anyone who chooses to ask for them. Proof coins are stamped with hand presses from carefully burnished dies, and the blanks used are also burnished. Thus the coins have a mirror-like polish, and are very beautiful. If kept in little buckskin bags,—as collectors usually keep them,—they will retain their beauty indefinitely. But you can get such proof coins only of the current year, for all dies used at the mints are destroyed annually.

When the government intends to mint a coin of a new design it usually strikes off experimental coins from the various designs that have been submitted. The experimental coins are then put for consideration before the committees, on weights and measures of the two houses of Congress. The committees, after advising with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Mint, choose the one they like best.

Those "pattern" or "trial" pieces are made of all sorts of metals. Thus, in these experiments the mint has turned out five-dollar, ten-dollar, and twenty-dollar, "gold" coins in tin, brass, copper, aluminum, and various compositions. Such pieces are of course highly valued by collectors who are glad to pay for a double eagle of tin or copper perhaps ten times its weight in gold. The Treasury formerly sold the trial pieces at high figures, but stopped the practice in 1887.

In 1852 the Treasury had patterns struck for a so-called "ring dollar" of gold, with a big hole in the middle. The purpose was to make the gold dollar larger and easier to handle, without increasing its weight. Another advantage was that it could be strung together with others, like Chinese cash. But the ring dollar was finally deemed unacceptable.

Hardly less remarkable than the ring dollar were certain patterns suggested in 1879 for "gold" coins, which were meant to serve as a compromise between silver and gold as monetary standards. They were of silver, but contained some gold. The "goloid" trial pieces are not especially rare to-day, for the Treasury presented a set of them to every Senator and Representative then in Congress.

Such trial pieces have a certain historical significance and value. From that point of view, by far the most interesting of them was the silver half dime of the year 1792. Several of those half dimes are extant to-day, and are said to be valued by collectors at $30 each. They bear the head of Martha Washington, and the silver of which they are composed was furnished by George Washington, who sent for the purpose some of his own family plate from Mount Vernon to the mint in Philadelphia.

President Coolidge Names November 29th, as Day to Give Thanks.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 5.—In his first Thanksgiving Day proclamation, naming November 29th as the day to celebrate, President Coolidge, in commenting on notable events of the year, such as the death of President Harding and the Japan disaster, says:

"This called forth from the people of the United States a demonstration of deep and humane feeling. It was wrought into the substance of good works. It created new evidences of our international friendship which is a guarantee of world peace. It replenished the charitable impulse of the country.

"We will do well, then, to render thanks for the good that has come to us and show by our actions that we have become stronger, wiser and truer by the chastenings which have been imposed upon us. We will thus prepare ourselves for the part we must have in a world which forever needs the full measure of service. We have been a most favored people. We ought to be a most generous people. We have been a most blessed people. We ought to be a most thankful people."

THE CONFERENCE

The Conference of Superintendents and Principals will be held at St. Augustine, Florida beginning Monday, January 14th, 1924, 7:30 P.M.

Deaf-Mutes Ban Old Sign System

METHOD OF LIP READING IS NOW IN VOGUE.

Sign language for deaf-mutes is a thing of the past. Remarkable that deaf and dumb persons are able to "read" the words expressed by normal people by lip-reading. French scientists have deduced that it would be only a step to have those unable to hear or speak to adopt the same method to express their thoughts. In other words, those so afflicted are taught to make with their lips the same combinations as those which they are already able to translate, thus transmitting their unspoken words to those similarly afflicted, or, in fact, to anybody acquainted with the system.

More than that, it has been found that thousands of deaf-mutes who did not use the spoken language for the simple reason that they had never heard it, learned to speak in a comparatively short time, once they had mastered the art of labial expression. They remain deaf, but they can articulate. The Deaf and Dumb Institute of Paris, which has branches all over the world, is now sending out instruction for the new method. The old sign system has been entirely abandoned.

Gallaudet College.

Those who want to see football as it is "footed" would do well to see the Gallaudet-Randolph-Macon game on Hotchkiss field, November 17th. These two teams are evenly matched and with our men going at their present stride the Buff and Blue should fly high again at the end of the game. Broken field running is our team's best bet these days.

As Coach Hughes was giving his changes final instructions for the Drexel game Friday afternoon word was received as to his mother's sudden death. Mr. Hughes left at once for his home in Harrisburg, Pa. His absence fell heavily on the boys at the game next day. The entire student body mourns with the good professor in his sad bereavement.

Mr. Gilbert O. Erickson, '03, a star performer on the gridiron in his college days was selected to accompany the football team to Philadelphia in Prof. Hughes' place.

John T. Boatwright, '24, took in New York after the Drexel game, where he was guest of her sister, Miss Sophia Boatwright, '21.

The Literary Society held another successful meeting on the sixteenth.

Critic—"Mr. Uriel Jones," '24.

Miss Mary E. Kannappell is among the list who spent the week-end away from school. She visited Miss Helen Moss, '23, in Baltimore. Mr. Uriel Jones, '24, realizing he is a senior, accompanied the football team to Philadelphia and later went to Trenton for a visit.

Gallaudet, 13 Drexel, 0

Before his hurried departure for his home the little coach pleaded with his men to do their best and play a clean hard game. So it happens that it all came out in the very finest way possible for the team turned in a clean cut victory over Drexel Institute at Philadelphia. The writer again has to report the game from afar. Yet he can well imagine Boaty's long run of seventy yards to a touchdown. The all-around brilliancy of Captain Langenberg and the stubborn defense put up by the Gallaudet line in the shadow of our goal, for several times the opposing team rushed the ball close to the coveted line.

During the last period the home team launched a drive, which went nearly eighty yards. Here they tried a forward pass, which Langenberg intercepted. On the next play he ran forty yards. This put hope and life into his men, and they launched an attack, which Drexel could not stop. Langy finally bucked his way over for the second touchdown. Killian kicked goal. The absence of Coach Hughes was keenly felt when the most critical moments of the game came, but Fred Moore, '17, a Buff and Blue field general of years goneby was there with a few words of advice.

Bradley, a regular back, was unable to make the trip so Scarvie took his place.

Messrs. Stevens, Moore and Dobbins made the trip from Trenton to see the game. The boys nearly all showed up early Sunday morning with nothing but words full of praise for the Drexel team, the officials and lastly, but not least, the Philadelphia Silent Colony, which gave a big "blow out," at its club rooms in honor of the team.

The "Ways and Means" committee is arranging a "theatre party" for the night of November 17th, the evening after the Randolph-Macon game, and has secured a seven reel drama for the occasion. Its a splendid picture.

CHICAGO.

Sonny, ain't it funny,
How a mellow mass o' money
Will drive away
The clouds so gray
And make life bright and sunny?
The youngest of all "Aged Deaf Homes"
Has just received five thousand bones?

Five thousand dollars was the donation Chairman Annie Dougherty, of the new Illinois Home for Aged Deaf, secured from a wealthy philanthropist—Mrs. J. B. Hall, widow of the Addressograph king.

In those long years, accumulating funds for establishment of a "Home for Aged Deaf," over and over philanthropists have put us off with the stereotyped phrase: "Show us the Home on its feet, and we'll show you the coin—no Home, no coin." We often wondered if this were not a tightwad "stall."

Since its formal opening in June several checks have been received—Milton Hart, the hearing hustler of the Board, himself donating countless small amounts from time to time. And all this while our Chairman, the estimable wife of Dr. George T. Dougherty, chaffed at her inaction—broken collarbone last spring.

But if she was unable to do much the past months, she more than made up for it by one single achievement. Mrs. Hall, one of several philanthropists she had on her string, had been out-of-town for months. Hearing Mrs. Hall was back, "Chairman Annie" decided to "do her bit" despite that bad arm.

Mrs. Hall was charmed with the Home; and charmed with the charming caretaker, Mrs. Hyman. The three ladies inspected and conferred for over an hour, at the conclusion of which Mrs. Hall voluntarily informed them she would send a check for $5,000 inside of three days. Which she did.

Some of the large Eastern Homes will snicker at all this elation over a paltry $5,000. They have received bequests of as much as $100,000. But Chicago's Home is young, and Chicago has known so many "busted bubbles" that every new experience is rapturously thrilling; every new achievement is cuddled and crooned over with the ecstasy of a child over a brightly-painted toy.

We got $5,000!

And we feel so happy.

This $5,000 was given by Mrs. Hall in the name of her deaf son, Charlie, who used to be a handsome fellow, but now is in poor health. She expressed the wish that it be diverted to a fund to give pleasure to the inmates who have no money—movie money, car fares, etc.

The J. Schmalzts—hearing cousins of Milton Hart—celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary, and felt so good that they gave the Home $100.

Ziao Fong Hsia, 23, who was brought from China 14 years ago by Mrs. Mills—the first deaf Chinaman to be educated in America at the expense of the Chinese Government—was guest of the George Schrivers the last few days of October. The Government had recalled him to take up his life work in China, probably teaching the deaf. He sails from Seattle on the Kaga Maru, November 27, arriving at Shanghai the day before Christmas.

Ziao spent 11 years in the Rochester, N. Y., school for the deaf—far and away the premier institution of the country for instilling a command of super-excellent English in its pupils—and three years in a technical college. Ziao is short, powerfully muscled, open-faced and engaging. Not self-assertive. Although English is a foreign tongue to him, he uses better language than many Gallaudet products I have met; but it is as a technician he amazes. I took him out to the stock yards and tried to show-off my knowledge of the technical problems involved. Ziao listened patiently, but was not visibly impressed. On inquiry, I found Ziao instantly sized up the technique, and also went far beyond me in understanding the mechanism, etc. That's what I get for trying to "show off to a poor, ignorant Haythen."

Ziao states he is a Christian of the third generation, his two grandfathers having been Episcopal ministers. While here he played end on his school football team, and played third base in the chess match conducted in 1916 between the Rochester school and my boys in Vancouver, Wash. The moves were written on postals, one move at a time, and when vacation came Ziao was the only Rochester player to be so far ahead that Vancouver would concede a win. He is a good dancer, polite and polished.

I took Ziao down to the Herald and Examiner, with copy, and they took his picture but did not use it—this picture will appear in the Silent Worker anon.

Besides parties and receptions by the Schrivers, Ziao was the guest of honor at a function given by Mrs. Ward Small—the petite queen of the wealthy and elite of Silentdom.

Quite a few have called on Mrs. Nellie Pierce Pyle Allabough—widow of the well-beloved Rev. Brewster Randall Allabough, of Cleveland, who was "administration whip" at the Philadelphia frat convention. She is glad to receive callers at Kindhar Sanitarium, 515 S. Ashland Boulevard. Her mother, who is with her, states she might be sufficiently recovered to be out in a few weeks.

The Rev. Dr. James Henry Cloud, of St. Louis, gave several excellent stories before a crowd of local silentists at the Sac, November 8th, realizing $13.75 to purchase waste baskets for every room in the new Home.

Miss Mabel Johns, the super-talented and much traveled oral prodigy (who is honest enough to admit the oral Nabobs are not too per cent perfect—thereby proving the oral system a success in her case, since it trained her to think for herself and form her own conclusions) went back to New York on the first, after several weeks here spent partly with hearing relatives and partly with her old friend, Mrs. George F. Flick.

Mrs. Gus Hyman had her tonsils removed at St. Luke's Hospital on the 6th.

Fred Ash came down for the Convention of Railway Electrical Engineers in Chicago early in November, and hitched up with Miss Yampka, of Grand Rapids, Mich. After spending their honeymoon here, they returned to East Tawas, Mich., where Fred has a good job.

Harry Hausfeld is the latest silent to "slip in" on a local paper, coming from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat after experience on papers in Winnipeg and other towns. He is an operator, and seems to be making $12 to $15 per night on "bonus strings."

Dates ahead: November 24—Frat vaudeville at Sac, managed by the Meaghers. Also lecture by Harry Hyman at Pas. 28—Barn dance at Sac. December 1—Frat bunco, Sac 15—Circus and carnival at Pas. Also Night in Chinatown at Sac, managed by Jesse Waterman, former conductor of this Chicago column.

THE MEAGHERS.

Divine's prune farm in Vancouver, Wash., is now back at the Kautz home in Portland, where she will be housemaid for Mrs. Kautz during the winter. A birthday surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wirth in honor of Mrs. C. Reeves, of Vancouver, Wash., on Saturday night, October 20th. Mrs. R. received a very fine aluminum roaster from the 25 friends who were present. Mrs. R. says it was what she needed for the coming holidays, which caused Mr. Reeves to smack his lips.

Little Miss Louise Spieler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ruby Spieler, celebrated her 7th birthday at her home, on September 25th, and received many nice presents from her mother, father and relatives.

Mrs. Guile Leo Deliglio is organizing a club among the young deaf ladies of Portland.

About thirty deaf of Portland attended the service at the Lutheran Church, corner of Ivy and Rodney Streets, on Sunday afternoon, October 21st, service being conducted by Rev. G. Gaertner, who has been appointed to take the place of Rev. J. Boyer, who has been called to Minnesota. Rev. Gaertner will preach to the Portland deaf once a month. The next meeting will be held on November 18th. All the deaf are invited to hear a good sermon. Rev. Gaertner is assisted by Rev. G. Price, who will try and master the sign language, after which he will preach to the deaf also. Rev. Gaertner holds service in Seattle, Vancouver, and Spokane, Wash., also at Vancouver. B. C. He is well liked by the deaf where ever he goes, and says if Portland deaf will get interested and go to church, he sees no reason why a church for the deaf in Portland can't be built within a few years. Let us all turn out and help keep Rev. Gaertner in Portland.

Mrs. J. Jorg, of Ruby Junction, became an auto driver before she every owed a car. Mrs. Jorg drove Mr. Alfred Andrew's Chevrolet from her home at Ruby Junction down to Mrs. Hastings in Portland all alone. She will soon buy a Dodge car.

William, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Thierman, recently paid his grand mother and an aunt a visit at San Diego, Cal. He returned after a six-weeks if stay.

Some time ago we read in this paper concerning Los Angeles having the most deaf auto owners in the West. That may be true. Now, let Portland brag a little. We can boast of having the biggest per cent of deaf home owners in the West, including Vancouver, just across the river, and about 7 per cent of those home owners also own a car.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtland Greenwald, who were married last June, will soon look up a good location to buy their own home. They are at present living in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Riechle. The newlyweds are well known and liked by the Portland deaf.

A hard time party will be given by the Portland Frats at the Red Men's Hall, corner East 9th Street and Hawthorne Avenue. All the deaf are welcome.

The writer is in need of more news, and desires the deaf in Portland and surrounding towns to send in important news of themselves and relatives, and if you are not a subscriber of the DEAF-MUTES' JOURNAL see Mr. H. Nelson, whom nearly every deaf-mute in Oregon knows. The paper should be in every deaf-mute's home. The writer can save you 5 cents if you order one year's subscription. Remember this paper is published every week during the year.

Bill—I discovered a new kind of whiskey the other day.

Mike—You did? What kind was it?

Bill—Chicken whiskey.

Mike—What do you mean?

Bill—Why if you take 2 or 3 drinks you will lay.

H. P. NELSON.

NEWARK, N. J.

Giving expression to the hope that the deaf-mutes of New Jersey might have their own clubhouse and community center, Frank W. Hoppage, president of the New Jersey Deaf-Mute Society, addressed about 150 members of the society and their guests in the ballroom of the Robert Treat Hotel. Mr. Hoppage's remarks were made in the sign language and were interpreted verbally from a written copy by Manuel Hoenig.

The society, said Mr. Hoppage, is the only one of its kind in New Jersey. It was formed in 1893 with nine members and incorporated in 1921. Its membership now has grown to about 100. Among its objects is the encouragement of fraternalism among the deaf between the ages of 18 and 50. The club maintains a clubroom at 210 Market Street, where the members assemble frequently. The speaker declared that the afflicted, through their handicap, were kept from active participation in the late war, but made up for it in their support of civic movements. The club now has a sick and death benefit fund and hopes, through the raising of funds for its new home, to become still more useful to the community.

RECTOR TELLS OF MISSION.

Another speaker in the sign language was the Rev. John H. Kent, of New York, who represented the Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes, and who himself is a deaf-mute. The Rev. Mr. Kent is at the head of the church work among the deaf in New York and New Jersey and the only deaf clergyman in the State, he declared. The services at St. Ann's Church, New York, are always conducted in the sign language, as the church is exclusively for the deaf. It has 450 members. The pioneer society for work among the deaf was the Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes, Inc., which started in 1872, said the Rev. Mr. Kent. It is the plan to establish a similar church and community center here. Arthur L. Thomas, one of the society's charter members, also addressed the guests in the sign language.

Among the honorary members are Charles Partington, William Hutton and A. D. Salmon. Besides Mr. Thomas the charter members are Byron Ward, John Mills Black and Paul E. Kees.

The officers of the society are, Mr. Hoppage, president; Henry W. Hester, vice-president; Frank Maestri, recording secretary; Louis Pugliese, financial secretary; Robert M. Robertson, treasurer, and John McClay, sergeant-at-arms. The banquet committee included Edward Bradley, Chairman; Philip Hoeting, Fred Hering, William Waterbury, George McMahon, William Dietrich and Frank Parolla.

FANWOOD.

On Election Day there were three basket ball games played in the gymnasium court, with good attendance. In the opening game the Fanwood Third clashed with the "Seneca A. C." team from the Eastside. The Seneca A. C. teamwork were very brilliant, and they were victorious by the score of 33 to 19.

The line-up is—

| FANWOOD-3d (19) | FOR. | SENECA A. C. (33) |
|-----------------|-------|-------------------|
| Rosenstweet | R. F. | Greenberg |
| Ep-teln | L. F. | A. Esbeck |
| Kahn | C. | Shafrenak |
| Dietz | R. G. | Stannykoff |
| Jacobucci | L. G. | J. Esbeck |

Substitutes—Forman for Jacobucci, Gelles for Stannykoff.

In the second game the Houstons, Fanwood graduates, and the Fanwood Juniors clashed. The Fanwood Jrs. led 15 to 8 at the end of the first half. In the second period our boys teamwork was very good, and they triumphed over the Houstons by the score of 23 to 12.

The score is—

| Houston | Pos. | Fanwood Jr. |

Fluk, 0 out of 2; Krassner, 1 out of 4. Referee—Lieutenant Frank Lux. Timekeeper—Cadet Harry Whitman. Scorers—Cadet Captain Robert Fitting and Mr. Clarence Peterson. Time—Fifteen minutes halves.

The playing was marvellous by the Fanwood quintette in the third game with the New Jersey Five. The Fanwoods won by a score of 32 to 29, and at no one time did New Jersey Five have a chance. It was a bewildering attack that the Fanwood showed, a smooth control of the ball with such rapid passing under the basket that the New Jerseys never knew where the ball was.

Below is the line up and score is—

| NEW JERSEY FIVE | G | F | P |

On Election Day, Cadet Lieutenant Arne Olsen, Cadet Corporal Pierce Blend, Cadets Barney Kindel and George Herbst, Cadet Musician Melvin Ruthven went to Ebbsen Field to see a football game between the Erasmus and Manual High School. The Erasmus H. S. won 23 to 0.

Last week Messrs. Thomas Whalen and Emil Mulfield, 1922 Fanwood graduates, were visitors, and enjoyed "Fingers" in the chapel.

On Monday, November 5th, at 4:15 P.M., there were quite a crowd of pupils to see a basket ball tournament between the Dicks and Joes in the gymnasium court. The Dicks by fine teamwork led with a score 10 to 3 in the first half. In the second half the Dicks increased the total to 16, while the Joes' was only 5.

Cadet Lieutenant Benny Shafrenak felt very proud of his brother on Election Day, because he played basket ball on that day, and his team won.

On Saturday evening, November 10th, Cadet Captain Robert J. Fitting and Cadet Senior Color Sergeant Edmund Hicks had a grand time at a party in honor of Mr. Clarence Peterson's birthday, a former pupil at Fanwood, at his home.

DEAF-MUTES' UNION LEAGUE

Sometime ago it was stated in this column that changes were being made in rooms of the Deaf-Mutes' Union League. The committee appointed to see the changes made completed their task some time ago, and now a great improvement is noted.

It has also been decided to discontinue holding social entertainments in the League's rooms because the last entertainments held therein were overcrowded.

At the last meeting held on Thursday evening, November 8th, 1923, it was decided to limit the membership to 200, and that number has about been reached. Applications will still be received, but will be placed on the waiting list. The Athletic Committee, headed by Abraham Barr are arranging for the Basket Ball and Dance to be given on Saturday evening, January 5th, 1924, are bustling, and the League's patrons will surely get their money's worth on that evening, for they promise to have two games, and also to begin promptly, so there will be no delay as in the case last year. The 22d Regiment Band will furnish the music, which is sufficient guarantee that it will be par excellence.

The league will not celebrate New Year's Eve as in the past, but during the day members will congregate and make merry, and if they bring their girl friends they too will be welcome.

The President, Mr. E. Souweine with the Entertainment Committee will have charge of the celebration of the founding of the League. The affair will be for members only, and held in the club's rooms.

X. E. S. NOTES

From henceforward there is to be but one organization of the Catholic Deaf at St. Francis Xavier's Church, 30 West 16th Street. That organization the Xavier Ephapheta Society. Rev. John A. Egan, S. J., is moderator; Jere V. Fives, president; John F. O'Brien, secretary; Miss Kate Lamberson, treasurer; Misses Nora Joyce, Dorothy Maushere, Elizabeth Moley, Rose Quinn, Sylvester J. Fogarty, James Lonergan, Board of Directors for 1923-24.

"Only one society at St. Francis Xavier's, the 'X. E. S.' were the words of Rev. Father Egan, S. J., on Sunday, November 4th.

Attendance was near to capacity. President Fives aptly interpreted in signs Rev. Moderator's sermon. Benediction followed.

At the meeting of the Board, business was dispatched systematically and speedily, and several new names added to the roll.

Mrs. Josephine Daly Regensburg and daughter, from California, were in New York for a brief sojourn last week. Mrs. "Reggy" and family anticipate their property may eventually develop oil, and in that event increase in value three-fold.

Next time the "Bucking Bronco" is introduced to local Frat circles Jere V. Fives, admitted at No. 23's last meeting, will do the riding.

Judges Thomas O'Neill, Miss Mae McLaren and Jere V. Fives prophesy high merit for the essays on Abbe to be competed for at the De Pepee celebration at the Carroll Club, December 2d. The prizes donated by President Fogarty seem to be a magnet for the competitors to do their utmost.

Tickets for the event, $1.25 (including banquet) are now ready. Reservations are requested before November 28th, through any member, or by addressing Paul Murtaugh, 5501 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The vacant chair at the McCoy Thanksgiving dinner will be accounted for by the fact, Miss Marion's brother, Detective James McCoy and his partner, John O'Hara, sail for Paris next week to bring back the ringleader in the Shattuck robbery.

H. A. D.

"Play the game of Life!"—was the major note of a sermon on "Sportsmanship" delivered by Rev. A. J. Amateau on Friday, November 9th. A large audience was present; however, the Assembly room was place for many more whom we hope to meet on Friday, the 16th, when Dr. Goldberg, Director of the Jewish Health Service, will occupy the platform.

At the conclusion of Services last Friday, Rev. Amateau extended an invitation to those present to be his guests at a "Congregational Social" which has already been held on Sunday, the 11th. It is his plan to foster a closer bond of friendship between himself and the congregations. Hence this special 'social', open only to those attending the Friday evening services, and which will be repeated on open Sunday evenings.

The H. A. D. Entertainment Committee announces a "Package Party" this Saturday evening, November 17th. Admission, 35 cents. Refreshments and dancing. A grand time is assured to all.

On Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 P.M. sharp, E. A. Bradford, Esq., one of the Editors of "The New York Times," will give an interesting lecture at the S. W. J. D. auditorium. Admission is free to all. Mr. Bradford, a recognized leader in the field of journalism, is a direct descendant of the first Governor of Massachusetts and one whom all delight to honor. It is hoped that the deaf will not fail to grasp this rare privilege of listening to the vital message of such a man, who, by the way, has lost his hearing late in life. Come at 2:20 P.M. sharp, please.

A business meeting of the H. A. D. will follow at 4 P.M., open to members only.

THE BLUEBIRD CLUB.

The Bluebird Club—a club composed of flitting young maidens, who went to school at Fairwood, and organized to keep up association and love formed in school, is quite alive.

On November 3d they celebrated the third anniversary of their organization with a dinner at Lobers' swell restaurant at 39th Street and Broadway, and then attended in a body to see Ziegfeld's Follies at the New Amsterdam Theatre, and enjoyed the show from A to Z—that is, if you know what that means. To them it was very pleasing spectacle for when the show ended, they were loth to leave, as they had been raptured from beginning to end, and on their way home they were dreaming of the brilliant time they had. Miss Rebecca Champagne is the President, and Miss Bessie Frey, the Secretary of the Bluebird Club.

H. A. C.

The Houston Athletic Club was organized by students of the New York Institution for the Deaf. At present the members of the Club, who are graduates, are holding their meetings at the Boys' Club in New York City. When all the members have graduated they will be able to afford a bigger and more furnished clubrooms.

They are developing a corking basket ball team and are open to challenges from any other New York team to try them out.

The first meeting was held on October 9th, and the following officers were elected for the coming term of 1923-1924: Bro. E. Malloy, President; Bro. S. Fleischer, Vice-President; Bro. L. Cahill, Secretary; Bro. R. Marshall, Treasurer; Bro. S. Finkelstein, Sergeant-at-Arms.

Last Saturday evening a number of deaf and hearing friends assisted Mr. F. Max Nemeth to celebrate his fiftieth birthday at his residence in Corona. He was presented with a handsome mahogany smoking stand with a humidor cabinet and the necessary accompaniment. Music and dancing, jokes and jolly conversation were indulged in till the early hours of the morning. A fine supper was served, to which the company did ample justice.

Mr. Nemeth was with the New York Bank Note Company for thirty-one years as designer and engraver. He educated many men in this art who today occupy good positions or who are in successful business. He resigned from this company last September, and accepted a similar position with better hours and environment with the Hamilton Bank Note Company in Brooklyn. He was graduated from the Lexington Avenue School, is a good lip-reader and converses readily in either English or German. He is also an expert gardener and florist, his garden being one of the show places in his town, which is now a suburb of New York City.

Mr. and Mrs. George N. Donovan celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of their wedding Sunday before last, at their home, in Brooklyn, and as is their custom, they entertained a few old friends at dinner. It was a sort of combination party, serving a "housewarming, and also took in the birthday of Mr. Donovan and Harry Pierce Kane, which fall in close proximity to each other, and celebration of which was deferred because Mrs. Donovan's absence in Washington, D. C.

That the dinner was good goes without saying—it was great. Various games were played and pretty prizes awarded the winners.

It was pretty late when the last guest departed.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. James F. Constantine, and their two boys, Jimmy and Clifford, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Buckley, Mr. and Mrs. James Salmon, Mr. and Mrs. H. Pierce Kane, George and Marjorie Donovan, Miss Annie Keightley, not forgetting Mr. and Mrs. Donovan themselves.

In the issue of November 3d, of the Detective Story Magazine Edward H. Smith has a narrative of the Eglan murder that occurred at the Institution for the Improved Instruction of Deaf Mutes, Sixty-seventh Street and Lexington Avenue, New York City, February 10th 1896. It is one of the many stories of mysteries from the District Attorney's office, and the facts were secured from the archives of the prosecutors. They are considered strange and hidden cases which are not prosecuted, and are considered the deepest mysteries of all.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Boswell and Harry R. Carr of Washington, D. C., paid a flying visit to this city last Sunday. George N. Donovan and James F. Constantine met them at the Pennsylvania Station, took them down to Coney Island to see the Boardwalk, which is already as famous boardwalk as Atlantic City, and showed them the other interesting sights. After having dinner at the Donovan's, they left for home on an early train, tired but happy. It was Mr. Carr's first visit to New York, and of course, he was duly impressed.

Mrs. William Lipgeus arrived back from Savannah last Sunday morning on the "City of Chattanooga," after an enjoyable sojourn of several weeks in the Sunny South. She visited her daughter in Macon, Ga., and was taken on sightseeing trips to all nearby points of interest. She came back in excellent health and reports a most pleasant trip.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jampol at 11 o'clock, November 9th, and left a baby-girl weighing 7 pounds.

The engagement of Miss Sallie E. Karten to Mr. Jack M. Ebin was announced on November 7th, 1923.

Deaf-Mute Mystifies Paris With Murder Sketch.

Mystery surrounds the identity of a vagabond about 19 years old, found wandering near Pontoise. The police believes he is an American, but the youth cannot speak or hear. He can only draw diagrams and pictures.

When he was discovered, penniless and hungry, he was taken to a police station, where an expert in the deaf-mute language failed to make the young man understand. On paper and pencil being offered him, he immediately drew a sketch of a house surrounded by trees, off a country lane. An automobile stood at the gate with two men in it. What appears to be an attack by armed men is diagrammed on the lonesome road, also surrounded by trees. One man, stabbed in the back, is depicted prone on the ground, while another runs across the fields to what suggests a steamship leaving some port—presumably for France. The sketch is not clear enough to indicate whether it is a boat leaving an American port. The young man is an expert cobbler and is being cared for in the Pontoise Hospital.—N. Y. Herald, Nov. 5.

Pretence is a lie acted to fool people.

OHIO.

[News items for this column may be sent to our Ohio News Bureau, care of Mr. A. B. Greener, 993 Franklin Ave., Columbus, O.]

November 10, 1923—Miss Jeanette MacGregor, who was near death's door in the early part of last Spring and a long time recovering as a result of the influenza, we are glad to report is in perfect form again. She returned last Friday afternoon from the mountains of New York, where she had gone last summer for recuperation, to the home of her father and sister in Grove City. She will remain with them until some time in January, when she will resume her duties as a social welfare worker in Corning, New York, where she was employed previous to her sickness. She is looking well and strong, and shows no evidence of having gone through a long siege of sickness.

We have it that Mr. Cadwallader Washburn, the artist, is back in Santa Barbara, Cal., for the winter, and is living in the cottage in Montecito, he occupied during his last stay there through the winter, and enjoy rides in his Willys Knights roadster through the valley and surrounding country.

The first snowfall of the season came Thursday of this week. There wasn't much of it. The weather was decidedly cold during the day in strong contrast with that of the two previous days.

Sixteen members showed up at the November meeting of the Advance Society with President Volp presiding and Mr. Showalter taking down notes.

Treasurer Oblemacher reported that the Society fund had to its credit $187.42, and that of the Home, $241.40, or a total for both of $428.82.

The 25th anniversary of the Society banquet committee through Mr. Schwartz reported it had received terms from several persons for the feast. The matter of selecting one, and also the date was left to the committee to decide. Probably the members will place their feet under the tables of the Great Southern Hotel, and the date be November 21st or 24th.

Mr. Fred Schwartz was delegated to securing the Society's annual Christmas gifts for the "residents" and officers of the Home. As there are nearly 40 persons to provide for, it will take some dollars for the outlay.

William Clark, who has been in the Home ten years this month, and is almost blind now, feels lonesome with nothing to do except to sit and brood over his condition. To relieve this condition the Society ordered purchased for him a braille writer, which in a measure will give him something to do and drive away his gloom.

Messrs Ernest Zell, George Clum and Albert Oblemacher were appointed to arrange for the St. Valentine Social, while Messrs. Wine-miller and Becker will audit the annual accounts of the treasurer. An attempt was made to hold the meetings in the chapel of the members preferred the present place, Library of the school. Next meeting date is December 4th, at which time the annual election for officers will be held.

The Columbus Chapter of the Gallaudet Alumni Association held a meeting in the Library of the School last evening. Seventeen members were present, beside several invited guests. Miss Cloa Lamson presided. After the reading of the last minutes by the Secretary, Miss Katherine Tosky, they were approved. A letter of thanks and appreciation from Prof. Harley Drake of Gallaudet College, for substantial contribution to the E. M. Gallaudet Memorial Fund last June was read. Also a card of thanks from the circulating manager of the Buff and Blue, Mr. Robert C. Fletcher, for a list of subscriptions to the publication.

Mr. Oblemacher spoke of the movie show to be given on the evening of the 16th inst., in the chapel of the school for the benefit of the E. M. Gallaudet Memorial Fund, and hoped that at least $50 would go to the fund.

It was decided to have a banquet by the chapter on the anniversary of the birthday of E. M. Gallaudet on the evening of Tuesday, February 5, 1924. Mr. MacGregor, Mrs. J. C. Winemiller and Miss Katherine Tosky were appointed a committee to arrange for it.

Mr. MacGregor in his usual humorous way related several stories—one about F. Grady, and of course, made every one laugh. Talks by others were given also. Then the presidents, Miss Lamson, requested all to stay a few moments while she and several Co-eds left the room. When they returned it was with trays of Neapolitan ice-cream, fancy cakes, and salted peanuts, which they passed around. No one refused the treat, but enjoyed every bit of them. After disposing of the there was more conversation, then with thanks to her for the eats members departed for their homes.

Miss Margaret Long, one of the teachers, was in Cincinnati from Saturday to Monday. She visited the St. Rita School and the Day School for Deaf while there. At the latter she met Rev. Utten Read, Misses Annie Jones and Margaret McCafferty, all former teachers here.

Otto Seidowsky, for a number of years employed in the kitchen of the school, resigned last week. He expects soon to be called to Mansfield, where he will receive better wages than he got here. Henry Hartard has been transferred from the dining-room to fill the vacancy thus made, and will receive better compensation than he got in his old position. A. B. G.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Silent Athletic Club, of Philadelphia, held its first Bal Masque, on Saturday evening, November 3d last, and its success exceeded the expectations of its managers and pleased those who attended it to a great degree. While it was not comparable in size to similar events in New York and Chicago, it was hardly less enjoyable than the events in those cities. This was largely due to the intelligence and enterprise of the persons who composed the Ball Committee, Messrs. Wm. E. V. Erogan, John A. Roach, Joseph V. Donohue, George H. King, James L. Jennings, Wm. E. Rothmund and Israel Steer. They selected Turn-gemeinde Hall, Broad Street and Columbia Avenue, for this event, which was an admirable selection in every way. Of the number of persons who attended—closely estimated at 350 a goodly number were masked, displaying a large variety of costumes, and those selected as prize winners were as follows:

LADIES

First prize, $10—Mrs. A. S. McGhee, as Champagne Lady.
Second prize, $5—Miss E. Dauerbach, as Duchess.
Third prize, $3—Miss Louise Kent Hoge, as Yeaster-year.
Fourth prize, $2—Miss Lena Scheckter, as Country Girl.

GENTLEMEN

First prize, $10—Edwin Levin, as Chinese Mandarin.
Second prize, $5—A. P. Krieger, as One half Gent and One Half Tramp.
Third prize, $3—Albert W. Wolf, as Miss S. A. C.
Fourth prize, $2—Stanley Krieger, as Tramp.

The music was furnished by the McGee Orchestra, the leader of which is a brother of our Alex. S. McGhee. Eighteen dances were gone through. There were a number of visiting deaf from out of town.

The present officers of the Silent Athletic Club are: President, Hugh K. Cusack; Vice-President, Geo. H. King; Secretary, John A. McCormick; Treasurer, Gustav Ashman; Financial Secretary, Joseph V. Donohue, and Board of Trustees, Elmer E. Scott, John A. Roach and James L. Jennings.

A pleasing event of the past week, (Wednesday evening, November 7th), was a reception tendered to Mr. and Mrs. William H. Lipsett in honor of the thirty-fifth anniversary of their marriage by their daughter, Mrs. Alex. Simone, Jr., at her home in West Philadelphia. Owing to the size of the house, the number of invitations were necessarily limited, and those who attended the affair besides those mentioned above were: Mr. Alex. Simone, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Lipsett and their children, a hearing sister of Mrs. Lipsett, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Dantzer, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Sanders, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. S. Reider, Mrs. Helen R. Wilson, Mr. Washington Houston and Mr. William C. Shepherd. It was an informal affair, but very enjoyable. A bounteous repast was served in the dining room, which did credit to the enjoyableness of the affair.

By taking advantage of special one day excursions to Philadelphia, on November 4th, the number of visitors to All Souls' on that day was considerably augmented. The following were among the visitors: From New York City, Messrs. H. McViag and Daniel Lynch; from Pittsburgh, Misses Lynne Bittner and Annie Dandenber; from Altoona, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Saylor, Mr. and Mrs. John McIntyre and son, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bandis, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Warren and two sons, Mrs. A. Richmond and Mr. and Mrs. J. Butterbaugh. On this day All Souls' had its monthly Communion service with the Rev. Dr. Norman P. VanPel Levis as celebrant, assisted by Rev. W. M. Smaltz.

On October 20th last, the Lancaster Local Branch, P. S. A. D., reorganized by electing the following officers for the current term: President, Mrs. John C. Etter; Vice President, David Charles; Secretary, John C. Etter; Treasurer, and Assistant Secretary, W. Scott B. Miller. This Branch is a live one, and we are pleased to note its continued interest in the good work of the Mother Society, the P. S. A. D.

Meagre news of the passing away of Mr. Joseph W. Atcheson, of Pittsburgh, was received this week. After a long painful illness, he passed away, on November 6th, was buried on the following Thursday. Mr. Atcheson was a graduate of the old Broad and Pine Streets School, an active member of the P. S. A. D., and for several terms, one of the Vice Presidents. In personality, he was a most affable, respectable and sociable gentleman, and his death is greatly regretted by all who knew him. By his death, the contingent bequest of his brother's will, by which the Home for the Aged and Infirm was to receive the income of $50,000 annually, becomes effective.

The Beth Israel Association for the Deaf, on November 4th, elected the following officers for the present term: President, Jacob Goldstein; Vice-President, Israel Steer; Secretary, Charles Schragar; Treasurer, William Klein; Sergeant at Arms, Jacob Brodsky. The members of the Association enjoyed a Halloween party recently.

James L. Patterson is mourning the death of an aunt, Mrs. William Raulston, who had moved here from Joliet, Ill., about a year ago. Heart troubles was the cause of death.

Mrs. M. L. Haight, of New York City, who had been visiting Mrs. Syle for a while, returned home last week.

Mr. John Call has gone to Georgia to visit his parents. He is expected to return here.

Mr. Owen Miller, of Hartford, Ct., one of our recent visitors, has returned home.

Mr. Charles W. Waterhouse was married to Mrs. John Wise, of Harrisburg, at All Souls' Church, on Saturday afternoon, November 3d. Rev. W. M. Smaltz officiated, it being the first marriage ceremony he performed.

On November 24th, Philadelphia Division, No. 30, will have a Balloon and Fish night at the Grand Fraternity Building. Admission will be 15 cents. Refreshments will be on sale.

On October 28th, Messrs. Wm. C. Shepherd spent a day in sight-seeing at Washington, D. C.

A Thanksgiving dinner will be served at All Souls' Parish House for $1.00, and it will include a light supper and admission to the evening entertainment.

Mr. Timothy Teh ying Hung will give a lecture on the Japanese Earthquake, as witnessed by himself, at Parish House of All Souls' Church, 16th Street above Allegheny Avenue, Saturday evening, November 17th, at 8:30 P.M. Mr. Joseph E. Lipsett will interpret. Admission 15 cents. Please come, Bring your hearing friends.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Some time ago Mr. O'Rourke, a member of the Committee on the Gallaudet Monument Repair Fund wrote Mr. Michael Lapides, President of the American school for the Deaf Alumni Association, and asked what had become of the Gallaudet statue which had been stationed on the front lawn of the Old Hartford school for many years until the sale of the school property a few years ago made it necessary to have it removed. Upon inquiry Mr. Lapides was told that the statue had been placed in a barn near the school in West Hartford. As it was in a state of decay it could not be stationed on the lawn of the new school; the school authorities preferred to leave the matter of handling that statue in the hands of any committee so duly authorized. Then Messrs. O'Rourke and Lapides got busy at once, and a brilliant idea seemed to enter their minds at the same time.

"Why let that statue lie idle all the time in a barn when its use can be properly utilized. Why not have it chopped into small pieces and send them to the deaf people all over the country who would surely appreciate them as souvenirs," both asked themselves. Now it happens that a movement is now under full swing all over the country asking the deaf people to contribute what they can to a fund which will go to pay the cost of a replica of the Gallaudet statue now on the grounds of Gallaudet College, and which will be erected on the grounds of the new school at West Hartford in the near future. Both men thought it would be a good idea to have a small piece sent to any one who contributes a dollar for the purpose as explained above.

An official sanction was necessary to carry that matter through, so Mr. Harley Drake, of Washington, D. C., was communicated with, who gladly gave his assent. Messrs. O'Rourke and Lapides are very busy business men, who live out of town, and they could not give all their attention to the work of sending small pieces to any one who desires them. So the writer was appointed to look after that matter. For a dollar received from any one he will gladly enclose a small piece of the Gallaudet statue in a small mailing bag and mail it to any part of this country. Surely there are many people, who would be willing to put their hands into their pockets, and dig out a dollar to send to the writer for they know they will receive a souvenir in return which they can put on a shelf, and every time they look at it, they will have the satisfaction of knowing they had contributed to a fund worthy of their help. Any one desiring to avail themselves of the opportunity to get small pieces of the statue for souvenirs, kindly write to James A. Sullivan, The American School for the Deaf, West Hartford, Ct.

SOUTH CALIFORNIA.

Norman Lambert, Swan and the writer have been working on the rock pile for some time. Awful, isn't it, Mabel? But the authorities say the three have been earning their salt, so they will get more than bread and water.

Cadwallader Washburn, the painter, dry point etcher, war correspondent, cosmopolitan, is living in Montecito. He has a new Willys-Knight roadster and a $1,500 police dog.

Lewis O. Christenson, on his return to Seattle, wrote back to his California friends the news of his safe arrival.

Hospitality is a relative term. In the old days when haciendas were far apart, hospitality was unbounded. Fresh horses were offered for the continued journey. A vessel with copper coins was always at hand, from which the traveler helped himself if in straits. But this magnificent California or Spanish hospitality died out with the passing of the horse. The gringos took all the money in the vessel, so hospitably filled, and hospitality was killed. Now the roads are crowded with motorists from everywhere, and hospitality which means entertainment of party after party day after day, is too expensive, too tiring, too wasteful of time to be offering. A hostess who thinks more of her remaining years of life than of offering welcomes to every caller, has sense. She is entitled to her own time.

Anna Marguerite Steele, of San Diego, and Fred Allen Pence, of Detroit, were married last week, Wednesday at the home of the bride's mother. Mrs. Pence is a graduate of the School for Deaf, Belleville, Ontario, Canada, and Pence is an Illinoisan. They will reside in Detroit, Mich.

Thomas Bradshaw is now working for the Santa Barbara Lumber Co.

California is either well forested or the auto highways are bordered with encyclopatius planted close together. That is the impression I gained from the ride in the Swan flivver from Los Angeles north. But Swan and Lewis O. Christenson assure me my sight is blurred, for they are mere telephone, telegraph or powerpoles. The speed of the Swan car is to blame. Why, it made the 98 miles in five hours!

It is the fashion among drinkers of beer and wine to decry prohibition and to blame the crime wave, increase of "dope" use and smuggling and bootlegging on prohibition. Illogical. Why not blame murder, robbery, divorce on adverse legislation? If the way to stop bootlegging is to license it, why not license burglary, murder, etc.? No, I favor prohibition for the future as in the past, and it has come to stay. With the education of the coming generations away from liquor, the problem will be simplified. Of what use is liquor? It is a delusion and a snare in little or big dose.

Too bad this was left out of my last letter: I was about to spend my hard earned money wrung from unwilling employers on a genuine crystal real glass diamond ring, in the greatest emporium of high-grade merchandise, Woolworth's, but I was ever slow. It is our mutual loss, for there may never be another such jewel in girl or rock.

Cadwallader Washburn has rented the Driver Cottage on Hot Springs Road near Pepper Lane, Montecito.

While clearing fence rows on the Patrick Henry Divine prairie ranch, east of Vancouver, Wash., two winters ago, I got poisoned from handling poison oak and poison ivy, in sweating. I tried many remedies, and strangely enough the best seemed to be common flour daubed on. Stopping the itching seemed to help prevent and cure. Last two weeks I have again been poisoned by poison oak. My face, hands and legs were puffed up, but the swelling was in time reduced. Saturday night in my weekly (or yearly) bath, I tried to make myself clean with hot water and soap. But I used the towel of the week to rub down. As a result I itched all over, like a kid, I persisted in scratching, and Sunday found me dead tired with itchy skin worse than ever. Too late I got acetic acid and baking soda and rubbed myself with the mixture. It sure did bite. This is Wednesday, three days lost from work, and I am not yet well. Did you ever see another such fool? Knowing myself, I am certain I will not learn to do any better next time. According to family men, a wife would have forced me to take preventive measures in time. Well, who will be the nanny for this goat? THEO. C. MUELLER.

OMAHA.

The local Frats gave a Hallowe'en party Saturday evening, October 20th, at the Nebraska School gymnasium. A fairly good crowd was present. Mrs. L. R. Holway and Chas. Macek were lucky, and each won a box of bon-bons. Bowling at 5 cents per bowl proved popular. Those knocking over all the pins at once received a rebate of 15 cents at which Messrs. O. M. Treunke and Jos. R. Jelinek copped several dimes and nickels. Pop corn was also sold and the committee made a profit of about $22.

Mrs. E. S. Waring's sister, her husband and their little son took the Waring to Griswold, Ia., in their Ford Touring car Saturday, October 13th, where they stayed over Sunday, returning by train from Atlantic, Ia.

Miss Constance Hasenstab, who has been a missionary for sometime was in Omaha recently and gave an interesting sermon to the deaf at the Walnut Hill Methodist Episcopal Church, and a lecture on China in the evening, at the Nebraska School.

Omaha experienced its first snow-storm of the season on October 29th. There was a heavy fall of snow, leaving a blanket one inch thick. The trees and bushes were loaded, making it a pretty sight, but the next afternoon turned warmer, melting the snow. We still have hopes that winter has not yet arrived.

The sewing circle field the season's first meeting at the home of Mrs. John O'Brien on Wednesday afternoon, October 24th. Mrs. E. C. Holloway and Mrs. Z. B. Thompson, of Council Bluffs, were present, and several were absent.

George Anthony, after being laid off at the Overland Tire Co., decided to go home, the 21st of October, to Cedar Falls, Ia., where he got a job on a farm. He is now thinking of going to Dubuque, Ia., to work. He has declared that he will never return to the Overland Tire Co., because they shorten hours and often work too hard for the money they give. George was almost broken down from that.

Rev. J. H. Cloud, of St. Louis, Mo., delivered his regular monthly sermon at Trinity Cathedral, Friday evening, October 19th. A good sized crowd turned out, and it is hoped that in the future more will attend to encourage in his work. A few of the members are regular in their attendance. There are no rules or fines, and everyone seems to enjoy himself or herself, though not much sewing is done by the Ladies' Guild. They have a plan to make some money, but possibly more will be accomplished if the sewing is done at home.

Mrs. Emma M. Seely entertained at dinner Friday, October 19th, for Mrs. Ota C. Blankenship.
